Dear Don ,

Extremely sorry for the late reply . Could'nt find a free state of mind due to the hectic schedule .

First of all congratulations on organizing a first of a kind corporate conference , that too among engineering students in an engineering college. The event was commendable in terms of hospitality , food , committee hall , reception , awards and finance . Hats off o you for taking so much hard-work in raising finance , running round the clock for food , transportation and accommodation and above all giving students a chance to explore a novel and technical field .

However the conference had some serious drawbacks which affected its overall balance.

1. Oblique idea : There was a lack of clarity between all delegates on how this conference will be , particularly on how MUN and MUC are related so as to cater MUNNERS on the same table.. The agenda could have been simpler considering it was it was first time .

The background guide provided was very vague and didn't direct in any way on how the committee would be or the path to research or the delegates should take in order to have a meaningful debate

2. Delegate count : 11 is a very small number for a 2 day conference . The lack of delegates stood out during GSL when speeches quickly reverted back , putting attendees in constraint . Also the EB wasn't able to moderate or propel the attendees so as to involve everyone and promote equal participation.

If there were any delegates from management , law or business field it could have made a great difference.( Take it into consideration in future )

3. ROP : ROP was one of the most conflicting factors of MUC . There was not a well defined , drafted , new ROP for MUC , which created a lot of confusion both pre-conference and during conference. This was particularly significant in case of debate and documentation.

I feel if these significant issues were absent MUC would have been a great event . But never be disheartened because you were able to pull off a wonderful event in terms of "Conduct of the event" . Next time organize it independently with a well drafted; MUC ROP..

Its a very innovative idea for a budding Kerala MUN circuit and can evolve into a fruitful debating platform exclusively focusing on Corporate world related subjects !

All the best Don for the next MUC . Endure the Legacy
With Regards, your friend
